With a Republican president in the White House and a Republican-controlled Congress, changes in our country's labor and employment sphere are virtually guaranteed. This presentation will be guided by remarks made by President Trump during his campaign, positions taken by his advisors, and results of the first six months of this new administration. Mr. Gevertz will share predicted changes in how the federal government will approach a myriad of labor and employment issues, including immigration, labor relations, employment laws, health insurance, workplace safety, wage and hour laws, and restrictive covenants.
