

Our Mission:

To improve local communities through charitable giving and to support quality construction education.

Giving back to local communities has many rewards. With its rich history of charitable works, the Associated General Contractors of Georgia, Inc. has long known this statement to be true. In the last two decades, AGC Georgia has contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars toward education initiatives. Our Young Leadership Program has added to this sum and donated hundreds of hours to local charities.

AGC of Georgia Foundation, Inc., our 501(c)(3) organization, was formed with two fundraising goals in mind: to support education initiatives that encourage young people to choose careers in the construction industry and to support communities where we live and work.

The foundation also presents unique opportunities for AGC Georgia members. It sets out to encourage and strengthen the future generation of commercial construction professionals enabling members to pull from a better prepared workforce. It also offers firms and their individual employees an opportunity to maximize tax-deductible giving in a way that supports their profession.

Investing in education, the profession, the industry

Education offers opportunities. From elementary school through post-secondary education, the AGC Georgia Foundation supports students in construction programs. Donations go toward enriching the construction curriculum across Georgia and providing more opportunities for students to understand career paths within the industry.

When you support the AGC Georgia Foundation, you provide money for students to hone their skills. Monies donated are used to cover travel expenses and supplies for local Skills Challenges and regional and state SkillsUSA competitions.

Money is also given to teachers to provide them with more resources for hands-on instruction. Schools are able to provide better construction labs and more hands-on project opportunities. Teachers are also encouraged to attend Camp Trade & Industry (T & I) each summer to learn new best practices they share with students.

Building communities through charitable giving

Our history of giving started with a desire to help make a difference in local communities. For more than 20 years, members of our Young Leadership Program have spearheaded AGC Georgia's community outreach. With the development of our Foundation, AGC Georgia is in a better position to offer more assistance to workforce development efforts, including contributions benefiting students in high school, technical college and university construction programs. Our YLP continues their decades of giving, which involves contributing to a variety of local charities, from honoring and assisting veterans and their families to helping individuals and worthy groups with building projects.

Give today!

Contributions to AGC of Georgia Foundation, Inc. go a long way toward providing a competitive edge to tomorrow's construction leaders and helping worthy organizations and the people they serve. Personal and corporate donations are accepted and appreciated.
