Technology over the past 30 years has become an integral part of a construction company's business process. Estimating systems have sped up the time and accuracy of job take offs. Project management systems have provided the tools to keep up with the details and schedules of jobs. Accounting software has made tracking job cost and expenses much more precise. Today, best-of-class construction companies are looking to "Go Paperless" to increase profits. These contractors are doing so by reducing the cost of handling paper and automating paper-intensive workflows.

Paperless Environments, LLC provides electronic content management and workflow software to the construction industry. Their solutions solve the problems of receiving, processing, routing, storing, and distributing construction documents.

Don't miss out - Register today along with your executive staff for this April 8 Lunch and Learn Seminar.
