Georgia's construction industry stayed steady throughout the pandemic, but what can contractors expect to see in the near future and what are economic experts watching for over the next 12 months? Will demand shrink with continued inflated materials pricing, supply chain disruption and labor shortages? How could the possible passage of a new infrastructure bill impact the industry throughout the nation? Ken Simonson, chief economist, and fearless forecaster for AGC of America, will share what trends he's watching and answer your questions in this interactive session.
