

Everything Managers with Construction Firms Should Know About Preventing Workplace Harassment, Discrimination and Retaliation

About the Lunch and Learn

This session is specifically focused toward helping educate professionals who hold managerial positions with construction firms on HR-related topics such as preventing workplace harassment, discrimination, and retaliation.

Bert Brannen, a former AGC Georgia Board member and a partner in the labor and employment law firm Fisher & Phillips LLP, will present this session. The fast-paced and interactive conversation will cover:

- Understanding what constitutes unlawful harassment, discrimination and retaliation;
- Adopting policies and practices to address these topics;
- Developing internal complaint procedures;
- Conducting investigations of alleged violations;
- Deciding on appropriate remedial actions;
- Building a respectful workplace culture; and
- Protecting your company's brand.

Bert will use practical scenarios and real-world examples to help attendees understand these topics so they can implement best practices to protect themselves and their companies.

This session will be presented live and in-person. Virtual attendance via Zoom video connection is also offered. Dialogue between all participants will be encouraged.
