

OSHA 30-Hour for Construction

Geared toward supervisors and all workers with specific safety responsibilities

About the Course

Many owners and prime contractors now require completion of the OSHA 30-Hour Construction Safety Outreach course prior to working on certain projects.

Through classroom instruction, participants will learn how to recognize construction hazards and implement corrective measures. Content covers the full spectrum of construction safety from Subpart A through Subpart Z.

While content is geared toward management, supervisors and others who work with a broad variety of construction standards, anyone in the industry is invited to participate.
