AGC Georgia President Trey Anderson invites you to join him at one of his upcoming President's Tour meetings this fall. He looks forward to updating you on the strides AGC Georgia is making to assist you and your fellow members to work safe, keep up with ever-evolving advances in technology, attract and retain employees and develop and train current and future workers and leaders.

During his visit with you, he's also interested in hearing ideas on how AGC Georgia can do a better job of educating all employees in your firm of the benefits and services that come with being an engaged member. AGC Georgia needs perspectives from all corners of the state and from all member types. President Anderson firmly believes companies with multiple layers of employee engagement are more productive and profitable in the marketplace.

These meetings are the perfect time to invite representatives of firms that are an integral part of your project teams, but not members of AGC Georgia, to learn more about our association and why it is worthy of their loyal support.
