

Bill Chambless joined AGC Georgia in 2006 and is an experienced codes enforcement professional. The Macon-native graduated from Monroe Co. Academy High School and went on to study engineering at Middle Georgia College. As an active member of his community, Bill is a graduate of Leadership Perry, and organized the first two Habitat for Humanity homes for the city. Additionally, Bill served as PTA vice president at his twin sons' elementary school and served both on the Board of Trustees and as Chair of the Future Planning Committee at the First Methodist Church in Perry.

Bill spent twenty-two years in code enforcement with 15 of those as a Department Head for local Government and Director of the Building/Permitting Department, the later ten years in Macon/Bibb County. He has served over 15 years on the Department of Community Affairs State Codes Advisory Committee, and while active in code enforcement, served on numerous code development committees and boards, most noteworthy, served as one of the chairs of the five technical committees that developed the first working draft of the International Building Code under the International Code Council; also the International Scoping Committee, Board member of the International Accreditation Service Board (IAS), and just prior to joining AGC Georgia was serving on the Governmental Affairs Committee for ICC.