CYBER SECURITY & LATEST APPS

Unintentional Actions Put Businesses in Jeopardy Every Day

Recent Construction Technology Forums focused on delivering new ideas and proven best practices to employees of construction firms. This program will do that and much more! All business leaders from any line of work will benefit from this program.

Too often, we work to protect against "known" threats; however, this practice isn't enough. Lesser known threats, such as cyber hacks are just as crippling as equipment theft or weather-related disasters.

Just as you can't protect yourself 100% from physical harm, there are ways you can make yourself less susceptible to injury. The same is true for your company's vulnerability to cyber-attacks. Are holes in your system locked? Are you educating employees on the latest cyber threats and what to look for in their email inboxes? Have you talked with your insurance agent about products to add to your policies for baseline protection?

3 sponsorships available; include table top for materials. Call Alyson @ 678.298.4106.

Members with traditional stopgaps in place will share horror stories and clean up experiences. IT professionals hired to help companies defend their intellectual property will also share best practices for today's threats. Learn about emerging tricks the attackers are using and how to build a pro-active cyber security culture at your firm.

In keeping with tradition, we'll also dedicate a portion of the program to sharing the latest on construction-related apps/software.

Who Attends? These programs attract a cross-section of professionals. Many are IT directors and project managers, others have a personal interest in technology, while many from smaller offices are tapped as the designated IT guru but have no background in the field! When this mix of professionals comes together, the conversation results in a valuable information exchange of best practices and lessons learned.
